What Is Collagen and Why Is It Important

Collagen is the most abundant protein in the human body and around 30% of all the proteins in human body is Collagen.

Collagen is fibrous protein mainly found in skin, hair, nails and connective cells. It is essential for these components.

As you age, the collagen level in your body starts to decrease by approximately 1.5% each year starting in mid-20's and reduces up to 30% in mid-40's.

If there is lack of collagen in your hair and skin, the hair falls out, easily breaks and gets thinner and the skin wrinkles, sags and loses elasticity.
